A TRIBUTE TO THE PRESIDENT.

The following letter from Sinclair Tousey, Esq., a warm friend of Mr. Greeley and one of his ardent supporters in the late canvass, is published in the Tribune of Saturday, under the heading of "an open letter."

To the President of the United States:

SIR: I trust that I shall not be charged with presumption in addressing you on the subject of this letter. I want to thank you, not for any favor bestowed on my friends, or shown to me. Thanks for such things are as common as the benefits they confer. I desire to thank you for something greater and better than these; for something much beyond the ordinary practice of high official life. I desire to thank you for the respect shown by you to Mr. Greeley on his death-bed, and for the great respect you paid his character and memory by your attendance on his funeral. It was a great compliment for the head of a great nation to decline attendance on an official festivity while a private citizen was dying, a citizen who had no claims on the sympathy of the official, either of blood or close friendship. It was a much greater compliment when that Executive laid aside the pressing duties of his great office, and, making a night journey of hundreds of miles, at an inclement season, took the place of a private person, among the thousands gathered together to pay the last tribute of respect that the living can pay to the dead. For your remembrance of Mr. Greeley, dying; for your attendance at his funeral; for the tearful attention you paid to the sad ceremonies of that occasion, Mr. President, I thank you with all earnestness. I am very sure that in doing so I but echo the sentiments of hundreds of thousands of your fellow citizens whose views of public affairs led them and myself to support, in the late canvass, the man to whom you have shown such high respect. By these acts you have removed prejudices, changed opponents into friends, and shown the world that great official life need not deaden the better instincts of our common humanity. By these acts you have taught the nations that Americans never forget what is due to the character of their great citizens, and that the passions of an exciting political contest never destroy the respect that American partisan opponents have for the good lives of good men.

I thank you, Mr. President, and pray that a long and happy life may await you. And when it shall please the Great Ruler to send the angel of Death to call you hence, may your passage to the tomb be made smooth by the affections of kind friends, and the grave close over you with the heartfelt prayers of your countrymen for your eternal rest. Very respectfully, yours friend,

SINCLAIR TOUSEY.

New-York, Dec. 6, 1872.

THE TIMES AND THE TRIBUNE.—A New York correspondent of the Boston Advertiser, gives the following gossip concerning the great rival dailies the Times and Tribune. Of the former he says:

The Times gained during the champaign and after the Tammany war I don't know how many subscribers, and I can't say how much business; but I am told by those who would tell me the simple truth, that it has now a daily circulation of from seventy to seventy-five thousand—and at the time of extraordinary events more,—against say from thirty to forty thousand two years ago; that its weekly edition has the splendid circulation now over a hundred and twenty-five thousand copies, and will have from fifteen to twenty thousand greater after the first of January,—against an exceedingly small and modest circulation less than two years ago; and that its advertising patronage has increased in like proportion, so that its managers may put their hands in their pockets if they choose and not to their advertised terms as "unchangeable." With the opening of fall the enlargement and rearrangement of the premises of the concern were begun, and now The Times has, if not the largest and most conspicuous, the best arranged newspaper business office in the country. It is twice as large as before, and half a dozen times as elegant and convenient.

Referring to the rumors of a change in the management of the Tribune the writer says:

The opinion of many journalists, who probably know as much about the office as the industrious spreaders of the rumors I have noted, is that there will be little change in the editorial staff, that a "figure head" will be by and by chosen, and that the paper will work its way gradually back into the republican fold, and that the course marked out in Mr. Greeley's now famous card which appeared in the Tribune on the second morning after the election will be followed. Reference to this card reminds me of a report I heard to day from "the very best authority." It is this: That the day after election poor Mr. Greeley—this is the term his friends now use, "poor Mr. Greeley"—came down to the Tribune office gloomy and morose, and at a meeting of the trustees, held that day, vehemently declared that the Tribune must be sold out; that it must change hands and get beyond his, or die. That a majority of the trustees disagreed and a long time reasoned with him without avail; that at last they made him agree to try again, and that they suggested the card and its tenor.

JOHN H. LYNDE, - - PROPRIETOR.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1872

THE PRESS THE LEGISLATURE AND OUR SCHOOLS.

The friends of educational improvement are looking forward with much anxiety mingled with some confidence, for such well-considered action by the incoming Legislature, upon the important questions affecting our common-school system, as will retrieve the hasty legislation during the closing days of the last session, and give a renewed impetus to the work of bringing our system of public education up to the standard of our necessities and the demands of a progressive age It is well known that we have fallen far behind many of our sister States in making suitable provision for the education of the young, and that in many respects our methods and our measures in behalf of schools are greatly inferior to those which are receiving the support of the most enlightened communities It will also be generally admitted that the proper instruction of the children of the State is a most important public consideration and that too much can hardly be done —provided it be in the right direction—for the improvement and perfection of our educational facilities and system of instruction. There will naturally be differences of opinion as to the value of specific measures, but when there is developed an earnest desire for improvement, it will be comparatively easy to harmonize conflicting views upon some valuable measures which will mark a positive advance

From all that we can learn of the composition of the next Legislature we are led to anticipate that the cause of education will be treated at Augusta this winter, with the reference to which it is entitled and with the liberality demanded by wisdom and true public economy The time for the assembling of the legislators is now close at hand and our object in this article is to suggest to our many readers throughout the State the important fact distinctly calling the attention of their representatives to this subject, with a recommendations by each as shall seem warranted by a sound judgment with a due regard for local public opinion In this way, the members elect to the Legislature will not only be stimulated to special interest but we shall obtain through the press of the various sections of the State a comprehensive view of the prevailing local opinions as to the existing defects and the measures best calculated to improve the efficiency of our public schools

The earnest discussion of this important subject by the the whole press of the State can hardly fail to prove instructive and beneficial We have very sincere convictions as to some of the needs of our system, which we shall set forth at another time, and others may as sincerely antagonize our views A comparison of notes may prove of mutual advantage and we hope that our suggestions may elicit a general response from our contemporaries

Of course countless topics of interest connected with this subject will present themselves and the thoughtful discussion of any of them will be worth something to the public There are, however several questions of special prominence and importance upon which we should like to obtain the views of the press of the whole State Among them may be cited the question of District or Town Supervision as now established in the schools of other States, the question of establishing uniformity of text books as a measure of economy and an aid in classifying courses of study, the question whether it is the duty of the State, after providing the opportunities for education, to make attendance at school during a certain portion of the year compulsory upon all children, within specified limitations as to age etc, the provision of school revenues which will enable Maine to offer her most valuable instructors a better inducement to render their services at home than is found in the fact that our teachers are the poorest paid in the country, and finally the much controverted issue in school the substitution of the modern Town System of conducting school affairs, in place of the old fashioned plan of numerous, small and isolated District

There are other questions which are perhaps equally important with some of the foregoing and confident that our brethren of the press can do the public no better service than by the agitation and discussion of matters bearing upon this vital subject of popular education

Some of the papers would have us believe that Democratic leaders in Maine are secretly associated in a Conservative candidate for 1876 Hon Edmund Wilson of Lewiston Wm H Simpson Esq of the Kennebec Journal and Wm H Clifford Esq of Portland are already named in connection with the nomination Considering the brief time which has elapsed since the September and November elections of the Maine Democracy in which two of the above gentlemen were pall bearers one is strongly reminded of the story of the Dutchman who was tendered a chariot speculation on his wedding eve when it was but a day or two subsequent to his first wife's death, and who solemnly responded his doubts, saying

Boys, you pester be ashame I mit yourselfs making such rooses like dat ven dare's been funeral here so soon"

The editor of the Baltimore Gazette, who is one of the most steadfast of the friends of Mr Colfax, asserts that Greeley would not have bolted from the Republican party had he succeeded in persuading Mr Colfax to contest with Gen Grant for the Republican nomination for President.

THE LOUISIANA IMBROGLIO In the desperate political game which he has been playing in Louisiana, Governor Warmouth has staked all and has lost. In his defiance of all law and official obligations, he has arrayed himself in hostility to both the United States and the State Courts and has now been impeached by the House of Representatives, to be tried by the Senate for high crimes and misdemeanors. After the organization of the Legislature on Monday under protection of U S Judge Durell's order, the House passed by a vote of 58 to 6, a resolution impeaching Henry Clay Warmouth, Governor and a Committee notified the Senate In the latter branch several Senators protested against the procedure, but the Senate by vote resolved itself into a High Court of Impeachment and at the evening session Chief Justice Ludling was sworn in as Presiding Judge of the High Court, by Justice Taliaferro. The Senators were then sworn and the Court adjourned till Monday next.

A joint resolution was passed declaring Warmouth suspended from office during the trial, and Lieutenant Governor Pinchbeck was qualified as Governor, took possession of the office and received the congratulations of his friends. The "fusion" members were in session at Lyceum Hall and adjourned late in the evening. Lieut Governor Pinchbeck, upon assuming the duties of Governor, issued a proclamation of the fact for the information of the people, and asking the co-operation and support of all good citizens to enable him to faithfully execute them

The N.Y. Herald's New Orleans correspondent reports Governor Warmouth as saying to him Monday night, that the city hopes remaining to his side of the house, was in the writ of prohibition from the Supreme Court at Washington. The hope was very slight and in the event of the writ being refused nothing would be left for the City Hall Legislature but to disperse and go home.

"Toby Candor," who is usually more accurate in his personal and political data, writes to the Boston Journal that "Nathan D. Appleton, the present Chief Justice of the Supreme Court," was Attorney General of Maine for the three years, 1857 to 1860. The present Chief Justice is the Hon. John Appleton of Bangor, who has occupied a seat on the Supreme Bench since May 1st, 1852.

The friends of Mr. Colfax in Washington assert positively that he has been solicited by the stockholders of the Tribune to accept the chief editorship, in place of Mr Greeley, and that the matter is under advisement on both sides.

HORACE GREELEY'S WILL CONTESTED At White Plains, on Monday, the daughters of the late Mr Greeley, with a few friends accompanied by counsel, appeared before the Surrogate to offer for Probate the will of their father This will was executed on November 20th, 1872 It had been written by Mr Greeley some time ago, but was only presented him for execution a few hours before his death It gave all his property equally to his two daughters The instrument had been placed among his private papers by Mr Greeley, and was only taken from among them at the time of his last attack, and at the first lucid interval thereafter, offered to him for acknowledgement

At the same time counsel appeared before the Surrogate to contest this will, and offering in its stead one dated January, 1871 The contestants are Samuel Sinclair, Publisher of the Tribune, — Richard H Manning and Charles Storrs, the latter being named as executor The counsel for the contestants then said, that he hoped that the proponents of the will would acquiesce in the will of 1871. He thought that the will executed by Mr Greeley before his death, did great injustice to Jerusha as it gave all the property to Miss Ida, with the qualification that one half of it was to be used by her at her own discretion in the support and education of her sister Gabrielle, and that some relations would be deprived of property interded for them. The counsel for the daughters thought that these remarks were uncalled for, and argued that Miss Ida had offered to assign to her sister one half of the property, also to grant suitable annuities to relations

The Misses Greeley then declined to consider any proposal for a compromise Regular proceedings for a contest will ensue on the ground of the incapacity of the testator to execute the will of 1872

The first witness was Miss Lawson, who testified that she became a witness to the will on the day Mr Greeley died. Mr Greeley was then a few hours before his death conscious and rational After some further examination of this witness, adjournment followed

The will of 1871 gives the property to his daughters, but in addition gives bequests to his relatives and a legacy, equal to the value of a share of the Tribune, to the Children's Aid Society of New York

The Herald says a good deal of indignation is felt at what is regarded as a heartless attempt to deprive the Greeley orphans of their inheritance

On Friday Senator Morrill of Vermont, presented to the Senate a joint resolution passed by the Legislature of his State, as follows —

That we cordially approve the course pursued by the President of the United States in his patriotic endeavors to reform the civil service so that honesty, efficiency, and fidelity shall be the essential qualifications for public position, and we hereby request our Senators and Representatives in Congress to exert their influence to accomplish the same object, and also to rid the Government of the abuse of the franking privilege"

The Boston Post again finds occasion to censure the absurd notion of local pride which repelled from the sufferers of Boston the promptly tendered aid from other cities It says —

The appeal of the Executive and Finance Committees of Relief comes as a most unpleasant comment upon the itself sufficient zeal and unconsiderate enthusiasm that led to so prompt and thoughtless a refusal of the offers of assistance which came spontaneously from abroad when our great calamity was fresh upon us The Committee plainly state that an appeal to other cities is now an alternative that may any day be forced upon us by the remains only too evident that the effort will be a strain upon the community unknown to our previous philanthropic undertakings (If it were otherwise, the almoners of the fund would not now, within four short weeks stretch out empty hands to the people It is useless to regret the hasty refusal gratefully and firm abroad, but it is now all the more imperative that Boston shall prove its ability, even though it pinches, and that in a spirit of due humility for what has else where seemed like arrogance

THE JUMEL WILL CASE The re trial of the famous Jumel will case began Monday in the United States Circuit Court in New York. The counsel for the plaintiff, George Washington Bowen are ex Attorney General Hoar and Messrs Charfield, Shaffer and Parker and for the defendant, Nelson Chase Messrs Charles O'Donor and James C Carter Mr Shaffer opened the case. The plaintiff on hear his counsel and attracted much attention, particularly on account of his resemblance to the portraits commonly received as excellent likenesses of George Washington It is probable that the trial will be a long one, nearly all of the testimony to be introduced being that of very old people and much of it is in the nature of depositions many of the witnesses being too old and feeble to be present in court The last trial lasted over a month

THE SOUTHERN CLAIMS COMMISSION The second annual report of the Southern Claims Commission to the House of Representatives, states that the number of claims filed since its organization is 17,700 for the aggregate sum of $45 000,000, of which 2788 cases, representing $5,424,314 as claimed, have been disposed of by awards amounting to about $1 183,000. About 700 cases, claiming $2 500 000, apparently meritorious, but with proofs insufficient for first awards, are under consideration This leaves about 15,000 cases, amounting to some $37,000,000 unconsidered, when the Commission expires by law next March With the experience gained in the past two years, the Commissioners think that they could dispose of all the claims before them in about four years, but it would require uninterrupted diligence to do the work, in that time

EDUCATION As a dedication of the new Jefferson School in Washington, D. C, on Saturday, the principal address was delivered by Hon B S Northrop, Secretary of the Connecticut Board of Education, on a comparison of the European and American schools. He strongly condemned the prevalent fashion of sending boys of this country to foreign schools

Prof Tyndall, the eminent English scientist, offered, cordially approving Mr. Northrop's warning against that practice.

M Mori, the Japanese Minister, said that he had just received details of the new educational system of Japan, which embraces the organization of 8 colleges, 256 high schools and 53,000 public schools, at which the attendance is to be compulsory for all children above six years of age.

A movement has been started in Boston for a National Greeley Monument Association. It is proposed to raise $500,000 of which $175000 is said, to be already guaranteed.

MR. GREELEY'S DERANGEMENT. Dr Hammond, the celebrated expert in cases of insanity, gives the following account of a professional interview with Horace Greeley shortly after his mental disorder became manifest —

I suppose Mr Greeley said a hundred times while I was with him —"Now mind! When I was born I died, and when I died I was born." This idea seemed to be perpetually in his mind, and when he repeated the words he would look his listeners very attentively in the face In order to test his consciousness I asked him if he knew Mr Dickens I knew that he did, for I was present at the dinner to Mr. Dickens, at which Horace Greeley presided He exclaimed —"I never heard the name in my life! Now, mind! when I was born I died, and when I died I was born" I then told him that Thurlow Weed had been to my house and was inquiring for him. He answered as before —"I never heard the name before. Now, mind! when I was born I died, and when I died I was born." It was evident to me that no gleam of consciousness remained. He very rarely answered the questions I asked him, and whenever he did the answers were wrong. He seemed to be troubled nearly all the time with a pain in the head, and would continually place his hand on his forehead, as though he was suffering intensely in that region. His pulse was very feeble, beating at the rate of 126 per minute, and very irregular and intermittent. It was so feeble that I found it difficult to detect the fact that it was intermittent. I could only do so by listening to the beating of his heart. An intermittent pulse is a dangerous import for a man suffering under the disease which afflicted Mr Greeley.

THE HAND ENGINES IN THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier

Believing that the citizens of Bangor ought to be acquainted with some facts in relation to our Fire Department not generally known, and having the opportunity, as a member for some years, of that Department, to become somewhat conversant with its condition and workings, I wish to make some statements in your columns, from which your readers can draw their own conclusions.

It is of hand engines that I wish more particularly to speak, as nearly half the Department is comprised in No. 3 Company—there being 50 men in this company, 30 in the Union Hose Company, which lay hose for the steamers, and 25 in the Hook and Ladder Company That the hand engine plays a most important part in the extinguishing of fires, is proved by the records of the department in this city for many years past. They are far lighter and easier to handle than the steamers, can be drawn through and over many places where steamers cannot possibly go, and the moment they are set are ready to work The earlier water is got upon a fire, the better chance there is of extinguishing it and the less damage results, and there is no disputing the fact that the hand engines, for the reasons stated above, have done great service and saved many thousands of dollars in our city And yet, they have of late years worked under many disadvantages Take the case of No. 3. The members of the company are widely scattered, and the alarm has been in many cases, not sufficient to reach them all Their machine is eighteen years old, of small size and capacity, and lacking nearly all the modern improvements, besides, it is constantly getting out of order, and is not to be depended upon Three times within a brief period the tub on reaching a fire after a long run over rough ground has been found practically disabled, simply because it is so old and decrepit that notwithstanding the frequent repairs, something gave way or dropped out, which could not be replaced in season to make it of use on that particular occassion. Then there are no horses which can be attached to assist the men in the night time During the day a horse is of not so much importance, as the men are nearly all at work in the central part of the city and can quickly reach the engine house, and besides a truck or coach team can be easily found and attached, but in the night when the members are in bed, but few can reach the engine when it is first started, and the precious moments lost while a half-dozen men are struggling to draw the engine up the steep hills which are to be surmounted in all directions, may prove most disastrous to vast amounts of property in danger

If the city means to keep a hand engine, why not have a decent one, which can be relied upon? Get one of the greatest power and capacity consistent with light weight—an engine with large cylinders and air-chamber, and folding brakes to give the additional leverage required as well as to admit of its being transported through narrow alleys and gates without danger to machine or men Such an engine would do double the execution of that now in use here, with half the number of men now necessary to draw and work it, for our city is poorly supplied with water, and the reservoirs are usually at such distances from a fire and so great a length of hose is necessary as to make the stream of comparatively little force when it emerges from the pipe Such an improved engine could be obtained for the old one and only $500 or $600 additional. Then make up the Company of men residing within a reasonable distance of the engine house, or what is still better, let two of the horses in some of the stables near the house be kept harnessed during the night, so as to be ready at a moment's notice to attach to the engine There is no necessity for purchasing horses for this purpose, as I have no doubt that for a small sum stable keepers in the vicinity would keep the harness on a couple at night. In the day time, as I have mentioned, this would not be necessary. The number of men in the company might be reduced, and the engine be still far more efficient than now

That our citizens and our "city fathers" will give this matter their careful consideration, is the earnest hope of

BANGOR POLICE COURT

Tuesday, December 10th. State vs. Cornelius Mehan, drunkenness; fined $5 and costs

SHERIDAN ON THE INDIAN POLICY Lieutenant General Sheridan's annual report is a short, comprehensive document. His remarks on the treatment of the Indians, all of whom are in his department, are well worth perusal, as they recommend a way of stopping the terrible outrages which occasionally cast a shadow of doubt as to the success of the peace policy pursued by the Administration. Gen. Sheridan says

"There have been no general hostilities by the Indians this year, but the number of murders and depredations committed by small war parties is greater than during the year preceding I fully indorse the efforts now being made to civilize and Christianize the wild Indians, and think that the reservation system and the policy of the Government toward the wild tribes is the most liberal and humane that has ever been adopted by any Government toward savage people, and so far as the military is concerned every effort will be made to carry out its intentions. The principal error that I discover in its successful management is that while efforts are being made to teach the Indian what is right, and to induce him to do right, sufficient importance has not been given to teaching him what is wrong. I very much fear that the course pursued toward the wild Indian does not cause him to fully realize from his own standpoint that he is doing wrong when he commits murders and other depredations, and if some wise system of punishment could be arranged and carried out which would have the effect of controlling him in his respect, it would much sooner terminate the Indian troubles on our frontier"

For the benefit of Democrats who insist upon carping at every act of the President, the N Y Times remarks that no appointment which President Grant has made has been based upon stronger recommendations than that of Judge Ward Hunt to the Supreme Court of the United States. For nearly thirty years, Judge Hunt has been well known as a leading lawyer of New York, and has occupied the highest judicial position which the State can bestow with the greatest credit. His eminent fitness for the Supreme Court was so apparent that last year, when it was supposed Judge Nelson would resign, many strong letters were addressed to the President commending Judge Hunt as the proper person to fill the vacancy. Among the signers to these letters were Hon. Horatio Seymour, Hon. Francis Kernan, Hon. Hiram Denio, and a number of the Justices of the New York Court of Appeals and Supreme Court, besides other prominent lawyers of the State. ... [illegible] ... New York ... [illegible]

The Richmond (Virginia) Enquirer says of Mr. Sumner's battle-flag resolution

"We regret that Mr Sumner should have cast his apple of discord among the people at this moment We are perfectly aware of the passions that will be excited by this movement, and in the discussion the South, as usual, will be the sufferer. It is too soon for us to expect to see all these monuments of the war destroyed. We cannot do it ourselves, and don't expect it to be done at once by the North. The best we can hope is that in time the most obnoxious will be forgotten or fall into neglect and disappear, though we are quite sure there are things connected with the heroic deeds of that struggle the South, will not be content should die and be forever lost to posterity The resolution of Mr Sumner was a very mischievous one, and the subject ought not to have been brought up until the people had been better educated in forgetfulness of the past. It seems to us some men were born only to make mischief and stir up strife, and must fulfil their mission."

It is written in a moderate, conciliatory tone, with nothing calculated to hurt the sensibilities of any nation or individual It was necessary to speak of the Washington Treaty, and to express satisfaction at the result of the Geneva Arbitration and the San Juan award But it is done in a modest quiet way There is not the slightest appearance of crowing over the issue as it it involved the defeat or humiliation of Britain

THE VOICE OF EXPERIENCE —In common with other large advertisers, we have had occasion to do business with Advertising Agents to a large extent We have tried nearly all the various agencies but came to the conclusion long ago that we could do better by giving our business to Geo P Rowell & Co No 41 Park Row, New York, than by any other persons They are prepared to insert an advertisement in one or four thousand papers, and at the publishers lowest prices We have tried them—doing business with them weekly—and we know they can do our advertising better and cheaper than we could do it ourselves Having the most extensive facilities for doing business, they never make mistakes—at least, they never make mistakes on our work —[Star Spangled Banner Hinsdale, N H

When the body and brain are well balanced, the stomach is capable of restoring the waste from which the system is constantly suffering, but when the brain is large in proportion, the stomach is incapable of supplying it, in other words, the expenditure is too large for the income. Here lies the cause of so much suffering from Disease of the Heart, Liver, Stomach and Lungs, which is produced by taxing the Nervous System too severely; and Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites is the only preparation known which imparts this vitality directly, and consequently the power to overcome disease.

The Henry F. Miller Piano.

It is now less than ten years since Mr Henry F Miller established his piano forte manufactory and in that time these instruments have advanced to a most prominent position their unusual merits gaining for them favor throughout the country The Henry F Miller piano fortes combine every quality that renders such an instrument desirable. Artists speak enthusiastically of the clear, brilliant and powerful tone public institutions favor them on account of their great durability No instrument could endure so triumphantly the severe tests to which the Henry F Miller pianos have been exposed, unless it was thoroughly well made The Henry F Miller pianos are in daily use in the New England Conservatory of Music and in other local and foreign institutions of a similar character and the high estimation in which they are generally held is attested by the award to Mr Miller of the contract to furnish instruments to the public schools of this city At their first introduction to the public these pianos immediately secured a recognition as first class in every respect, and on this basis a large business has been built up and is steadily advancing the instruments more than sustaining their reputation and increasing in favor as they become more widely known The Henry F Miller pianos are now scattered throughout the country in private residences and in public institutions everywhere speaking for themselves in their own magnificent tones.

THE POOR NOT WITH THEM

BY [illegible]

I read [illegible] thus and so
[illegible] is to build the chapel wa[illegible]
Wherein the poor may come to pray
Nor mingle with the rich at all.

[illegible] dreamed a dream
Where [illegible] defying sense and law
A strange and ancient company
Of common fishermen I saw

From whence they came I could not tell
[illegible] weary and sad they seemed to be
[illegible] still by gray on porch and spire
[illegible] watched and waited wistfully.

They listened to the Sabbath bells,
[illegible] where some organ tone
Recalled the surge of Galilee
Making its low, unceasing moan

They looked within the arched door
Where softly lights and shadows play
[illegible] over dainty garments worn
[illegible] mighty ones who seemed to pray

[illegible] the fisher folk looked down
[illegible] raiment weather worn,
[illegible] away save one more [illegible]
[illegible]

Who asked the sexton at the door
"We seek our Master Is he near?"
[illegible] I heard his answer No, oh, no
[illegible] but carriage Christians here

[illegible] waited for a while
[illegible] the doors were opened wide
[illegible] stream went by
They knew their shabby robes [illegible]

But never found the friendly face
[illegible] sunshine knew
[illegible]
[illegible] walked through Galilean dew

[illegible] they looked again to see
[illegible] they had [illegible] read aright

THE SPARE BED.

BY MRS H [illegible] LOWE

(Concluded)

[illegible] cancer doctor—draw [illegible] on with poultices an' plasters—you've heard tell [illegible] Dr Wilson I spose?" "No? Well [illegible] her, an' she bridled up an' looked fust at me an' then at Cinthy, an' then looked back to me again as much as to say "What [illegible] that?" and as I didn't know what [illegible] I jest said

"Why how you talk!"

"Yes," says she "that's my profession [illegible] I [illegible] too far when I say [illegible] that I have been remark[illegible] I've cured cases that all the [illegible] doctors had given up [illegible] make [illegible] them [illegible]

[illegible]

My gettin married all come about in the [illegible] business. You see this [illegible] recommended him to see me [illegible] I was about as big as a good sized [illegible] with a kind o' seedy look at the [illegible] the minute I clapped my eyes

I see what 'twas and says I [illegible] one of the very worst kind too I guess you never se[illegible] frightened creatur than he was when I told [illegible] I went right to work on it, and [illegible] you would [illegible] known that there'd been so much as a pimple there [illegible] he was dreadful [illegible] hadn't the money to [illegible] when he should be [illegible] I'd marry him and call the [illegible] He agreed to that, an' we [illegible] So you see, I [illegible] by him as I agreed to do, [illegible] say this much for him that he's been [illegible] behaved as husbands gen[illegible] the house in [illegible] decent or [illegible] his own victuals when I've [illegible] times two or three weeks at [illegible] own But [illegible] I noticed that he was gettin [illegible] and when I brought him [illegible] he grumbled ab[illegible] [illegible] anywhere to wear [illegible] of that kind that I [illegible] when I [illegible] last fall and found that he'd [illegible] school I [illegible] up my mind that it would be the best [illegible] him of his discon[illegible] him try takin' one of [illegible] I'd seen [illegible] like it—[illegible] been pretty steady."

[illegible] says I [illegible] was [illegible] of brute.

[illegible] what I know [illegible] I shouldn't wonder if he [illegible] taken back when he comes [illegible]

[illegible] I knew was the [illegible] minute in he come [illegible] as pleasant as usual an' [illegible] at the table with her [illegible] he says to [illegible]

[illegible] colder since the sun went [illegible] have——"

[illegible] what he was [illegible] to say [illegible] eyes fell on his wife's face, [illegible] as white as a sheet and [illegible] steady myself [illegible] trembled like a man with the [illegible] there didn't [illegible] if he was [illegible] seem to mind it a bit, [illegible] course, [illegible] and says she

"[illegible]? Didn't expect [illegible]

[illegible] got up and shook hands with [illegible] a neighbor [illegible] mind that he didn't say any [illegible] and then she went on tellin [illegible] an' he washed drawed [illegible] a rich old man that had paid [illegible] that she'd concluded to buy a [illegible] farm something ter take up yer attention while I'm away" (and here she give [illegible] a sly wink) "you know what the Bible says that Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do"

But he never answered her a word He'd dropped into a chair by the fire without takin' his hat or coat and had covered his face with his hands but I could see that [illegible] and his fingers twitched [illegible] she spoke as if the very sound [illegible] a torture to him and I don't [illegible] when at last, she got up, and marched up to him and put her great hand on his shoulder he shrank away from her just as if he thought she was goin' ter strike him and when she hinted in her rough, good natured way that he'd better take off his outside fixins and make himself ready for supper he minded her right off, jest as if he couldn't help it.

Nobody had much to say at the supper table that night but the doctor herself, and her tongue run like a mill clapper It fairly made me sick to hear her tell how the cancers look [illegible] she drawed out, with their great, [illegible] feelers stretchin' out in every direction, and their big spidery bodies, till I couldn't swaller my apple sauce, it made me think of the bloody, slippery messes that she told about with such a relish, and when I broke open a biscuit it seemed so much like a poultice that I couldn't get it down ter save my life Cinthy never looked at nor took the least notice of Wilson, but I for one pitied the poor man, I couldn't help it. To have to live with that awful woman all the rest of his life seemed about as hard a chance as any body could have, in this free and Christian land

After supper who should come creepin' in but Sile Whitten, and I must say I was completely dumbfounded to see Cinthy smile at him an' wish him 'good evenin',' as pleasant an' polite, as if he'd been the President himself, when I knowed how she'd hated the very sight of 'im ever since they was children, and how mad it had made her to have him hangin' round after her as he always did.

But to-night, they got into a corner together, and was laughin' an' whisperin' between em all the evenin', and when he went away she went to the door with him and there was a long talk in the entry that made me feel, somehow, uneasy. Not that I had anything particular against Sile (he was an honest, clever critter as ever lived, if he was a little lackin' in the upper story,) but I didn't believe that Cinthy had changed her mind about him so sudden as all that, and I was afraid that she'd make trouble for herself and him too, by showin' him so much attention when she didn't really mean nothin' serious.

But I might have spared myself that worriment, for a week after Dr. Wilson and her husband had started for home, Cinthy come to me one night, after I'd jest finished rakin up the fire an' was a settin' alone over it, thinkin' over one thing an' another as mothers and house-keepers are apt to when every body else is asleep an' restin' their brains as well as their bodies, and says she, kind o' low an' faint like

"Mother, I've got something to tell you," and she trembled jest like a leaf, while the hand that she put on my shoulder was jest as cold as an icicle

"Silas Whitten has asked me to marry him"

"What!" says I startin' up in a twitter, "you don't mean it," but she caught me up as quick as a snap

"I do mean it," says she, "and I don't know what you or anybody else can have to say against it He's an honest, steady man, owns one of the best farms in town, and cares enough for me to want me for his wife"

I listened to her but I couldn't say a word, it all seemed so strange, so like a dream to me, and then, all of a sudden, it seemed to me as if the years were goin' backwards, to a night some eighteen years before, and all the tenderness that I'd felt for her when her little feeble baby cry first sounded in my ears, and I knew for the first time what 'mother love,' meant came over me once more, and I put out my hands a gropin' in the faint, dying fire light with a strange, pitiful trembling and drew her close to me, while I sobbed out (for I was a cryin' like a baby)

"Oh, my dear dear, girl! don't marry this [illegible] You know you don't an' can't love [illegible]"

She dropped her head on my shoulder and I could feel the big tears droppin' one after the other but she didn't answer me a word till I spoke up again, for I felt the old Adam risin' up in me at the sight of her sufferin's

"I wouldn't throw myself away jest to spite that rascally schoolmaster"

She jumped up as if she'd been shot, and snatchin' her hand from mine muttered somethin' about its being none of our business what he was and the next minute I heard her chamber door slam behind her, and that's the last time he was ever mention[ed] between us

Did she marry Whitten?

Oh yes and between you an' me an' the [illegible] if ever a man was to be pitied he's that man for she never has given him an hour's peace since she had 'im Now I don't believe in folks talkin about the faults of their own flesh an' blood but of all the scolds that ever I saw, Cinthy does beat all! And the queer of it is the more he tries to please her the more she won't be pleased

I never shall forget the last time that hus[band] and I was over there It was in hog [killin'] time, and we found Cinthy up to her e[lbow]s in lard an' hashin' sausage meat, a flyin' round from one thing to another like a crazy bumble bee, scoldin' the girl because she let the cob fire under the hams go out, boxin' the children's ears every time one of 'em run across her track, and flinging every spare minute with a runnin' fire on poor Sile who had left his own work to help her, an' was gettin' his pay for it in scoldin

We spent the afternoon, and when we was ridin' home in the still, pleasant moonlight I said to Stephen

"How I do wish Cinthy'd try to control her tongue better She might have as pleasant a home as any woman could ask for, if she'd only do her part in makin' it so"

He didn't say a word at first, but I knew he was thinkin' of it over, and when he did speak I could tell by the look of his face as well as a certain something in his voice that there was a dreadful sad feelin' down in his [heart] that his half jokin' answer was meant to hide

"It was that spare bed that did the mischief, mammy, for if we hadn't had that we couldn't a' had the schoolmaster, and if we hadn't a' had the schoolmaster, Cinthy wouldn't a' had the man that she always did an' always will despise"

"That's true," says I "but I do wish she'd try to be a little better natur'd for the children's sake, if for nothin' else

He give somethin' between a sigh an' a whistle, and as we was passin' the new burying ground just then, he pointed with the handle of his whip to a lot in the northeast corner, and says he

"The lots are pretty well taken up already, but I've managed to find a spare bed for us up there between Tribulation Rhines and Peace Peabody"

And in just a month from that day we laid him in it

I planted the blush rose bush that he used to think was so pretty, close to his feet; and if you'll believe it, I never go there to water and tend it but it don't seem to me that I can hear him callin', in the same voice that I remember as well as if I'd heard it only yesterday instead of years ago:

"Come, come, Dolly, you ain't a' going ter set up all night, be ye?" and I always whisper back—can't help it somehow

"I'm coming jest as soon as the fire has burned low enough to rake up,"—and that thank God will be very soon, now—[Portland Transcript.
